Commencement at the University of Vermont-The late Dr. Marsh, &c. Correspondence of the Tribune. BURLINGTON, Vt., Aug. 4, 1842. The annual Commencement of the University at this place was celebrated on Wednesday, the 3d inst. The exercises were, as they have uniformly been since I have been in the habit of attending them, highly interesting and indicative of more thorough culture and more thoughtful preparation than are usually evinced by College performances. The Society of Religious Inquiry, as its annual celebration on Monday evening, was addressed by Prof. Brown, of Dartmouth College. The chief purpose of his discourse was to show that the Christian Religion is not only recommended to man by Revelation, but that its truth and necessity are demonstrated by Philosophy, and its requirements sanctioned by the highest Prudence. It was marked by clearness and method, and by a style of exceeding grace and beauty. On Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Calvin erary Societies of the University. His chief aim was to examine the character and tendencies of the popular Science and Literature of the day, and especially of the Lectures which have been so fashionable during the past winter. In themselves, he considered them of little worth; but he was inclined to regard them as full of promise, for he thought them indicative of a deep want in society which is beginning to be felt, and which will, in the near future, be more fully satisfied .-The Oration was evidently the careful labor of an able, tasteful and pains-taking mind. It was quite long and full in its discussion of the general features of the subject chosen. It abounded in passages of great beauty, and though its style was occasionally obscure and marked, somewhat too much for the general taste, by what are rather indefinitely styled Carlyleisms, it was received as well worthy to take its place in the series of excellent Literary Orations which, from year to year, have been delivered before these Societies.

The Exhibition of the Junior Class was held on Tuesday evening, and on Wednesday occurred the exercises of the Graduating Class-which was smaller than usual, numbering only sixteen. Orations were delivered by two candidates for the Muster's degree-Mr. JAMES FORSYTH, of Keeseville, N. Y. and E. T. DANA, Esq. of Boston. The first urged the duty of American students to take part in the active duties of life, making the studies of the closet subordinate to these, and rather incidents, than the main basiness, of life. The latter was decidedly in maintenance of the opposite opinion, and embraced an argument against the popular proposition, that nothing great in Literature can at present be rightfully demanded of America by reason of her national youth. Both were among the ablest productions of their class I have ever heard. No honorary degrees were conferred.

At the regular meeting of the Alumni of the University, it was resolved to erect a monument to the memory of the late Dr. James Marsh. A committee of seven was appointed, Hon. Timothy FOLLET, Judge COLLAMER Rev. Messrs. BLISS, FLEMING and others I do not recollect, being members, to carry the measure into execution. A eulogy is likewise to be pronounced before the Alumni at their next annual meeting. The following resolutions, reported by Mr. H. J. RAYMOND, of New-York, from a committee appointed for that purpose, the other members being George K. PLATT of Burlington, and A. O. Aldis, Esq., of St. Albans, were unanimously adopted:-

Resulved, 1. That in the death of the late Professor MARSH we deplore the loss, to his personal friends, of one whose warm benevolence, whose gentleness and benignity of spirit and the depth and parity of whose affection bound him closely to their hearts and gave profounder anguish to the event of his early and lamented decease.

Resolved, 2. That by this event the University of Vermont has lost a most ardeat and efficient friend, a great partion of whose life was devoted to the promotion of her welfare and to whose untiring and lofty labors she is indebted for much of her high usefulness and honor.

Resbleet, 3 That the Spiritual Philosophy to which his life was wedded has lost in the death of Dr. Marsh an advocate of great and extending power—who vindicated by the sublime simplicity of his life the great principles of Relig-ph which he taught, and who enforced them thus to the pinds of all who listened to his instructions not less by the ininds of all who listened to his instructions not less by the majesty and worth of his personal example than by the personave cloquence of his words.

**Resolved**, 4. That to us, the associated Alamni of the University of Vermont, his death is like that of an affectionate father. While favored by his personal presence we listened to his teachings with reverence and love; we beheld his life moulded into a fabric of highest beauty by the wisdom from on High; and now that his spirit can only rule us from its urn—the remembrance of both shall be to our hearts the formain of unwavering strength and of highest bope.

**Resolved**, 5. That we will forever cherish in our immost souls, with sacred care, the memory of his name and deep Resolved, 5. That we will torever therish in our inmost soils, with sacred care, the memory of his name and deep gratitude for his instructions and example; and that—in all the walks of life—as wide as the sphere of our labors may extend—shall be spread the hallowed innuence of these great principles of Duty and of Truth which we received from his lips, and from all the language of his life.

Resolved, 6. That we will cheerfully and unitedly co-operate with the Committee we have appointed to carry into execution such plan as they may devise for giving some permanent and prominent form to the reverential regard in which we hold the memory and the character of our late beloved Professor.

The philosophical manuscripts of the lamented Professor, I am sorry to say, have been found less complete than it was hoped they would be. He has left, however, many sermons of great worth, and his correspondence, which was very extensive, is of unequalled value. Prof. TORREY, who has charge of all his papers, is preparing them for publication with all the haste compatible with the requisite care. Under his direction, I am confident, the work will be of more value to students and thoughtful minds, than any other of a similar character ever issued in this country.

Yours, &c.

Commencement at Hamilton College. Correspondence of The Tribi

ONEIDA COUNTY, Aug. 4, 1842. I attended the Annual Commencement at Hamilton College on Wednesday, July 27th; the day was beautiful, and the large church in the village of Clinton was crowded to excess. The graduating class consisted of twenty-three young gentlemen, all of whom took part in the exercises; where all was so good it is difficult, if not invidious, to make a selection of any one performance, as entitled to particular commendation. In truth almost all the performances were of a high order, and were delivered with a spirit and grace highly creditable to themselves, and to Professor Mandeville, to whom this department particularly belongs. The friends of this College, and of Education, have every reason to rejoice in the prospects of this institution. The number of students has gradually gone on increasing, until they now number considerably over one hundred; and there is prospect of an unusually large Freshman class. The class that has just graduated was the smallest

Hamilton College also possesses an excellent board of instruction, and furnishes the means of a thorough education, at an expense somewhat less

I understand also, that the College is now nearly out of debt. When it is considered that the College Buildings are large and commodious, situated in one of the most lovely spots on the face of the earth, in the centre of this great State, may we not hope that its success may hereafter be commensurate with the wishes of its most ardent

Correspondence of the Tribune. MILWAUKIE, W. T., July 25, 1842. Friend Greeley: I arrived here in the steamooat Great Western from Buffalo last month, and have been into the interior as far as Rock River, and down to Rockford, Ill. Six years ago the coming August, I traveled over nearly the same section of country with Messrs. S. P. and C., camping out over night for two weeks. It was then without roads, save Indian trails, and uninhabited except by the natives. It is now almost one continuous field of grain, and as fine roads (save about 25 miles through the timbered land) as can be found in any country. This town has a population of 2,000, the county 10,500, and the Territory from 45,000 to 50,000. It is estimated that ten thousand emigrants will have reached the western shore of Lake Michigan in all this season. There has been received at the Land Office at this place, since it was opened in 1836, about two millions of dollars, and not the great taste, as is also the arena for the athletic first red cent appropriated by Congress to build a Harbor. No place in the United States of the same importance has been so long neglected .-Many valuable lives and an immense amount of property have been lost for the want of it. There is a line, consisting of eight of the largest class steamboats, which cost from $80,000 to $100,000 each, running from Buffalo to Chicago, leaving each place every alternate day, touching here go ing and coming, which gives them a beat daily, besides the Oswego line, and any number of sail craft. The principal articles shipped from here are Wheat, Flour, Oats, Corn, Ashes, Perk, Hides, Furs, Coffee, Shot and Lard. About 600 tons Pig Lead and 100 tons Copper and Shot have been shipped from here this season. It is brought from the mines by ox teams, a distance of from 20 to 100 miles. The Wheat crop looks fine in Southern Wisconsin and the north part of Illinois, and all other crops except Corn. The month of June and fore part of July was cold and unfavorable for the latter, although 1 saw a field ef Corn near Rock River, last week, seven feet high, and south of the Illinois River, I am told, it never looked better than this season. The country is healthy, and rich in every production of this latitude, and every industrious man and woman that I have seen in the Territory is contented and happy, and no desire to leave their adopted home and return to the East. We are not told the extent of the Garden of Eden, and may not this ountry between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi River, including the south part of Wisconsin and Northern Illinois, be a portion of it? The Badgers claim the latter as a portion of their territory, agreeable to the ordinance of '87, and Gov. Doty has sent a remonstrance to the Governor of Illinois against locating lands on this tract, under the Distribution Act, and the inhabitants are deeidedly in favor of being attached to Wisconsin, that they may free themselves from the State debt or dishonor of repudiation. New villages are starting into life in every direction. Racine, 30 miles south of this, on the lake shore, has a popu- $1 00 will receive 13 copies. On Fox River is Prairieville, Rochester and Burlington, flourishing villages, besides many others between Fox and Rock Rivers. At Beloit, on Rock River, near the Illinois line, where in '36 there was not a white man to be found, there is now a village of more than 600 inhabitants, and as pretty a town as any in the State of New-York of the same population. Many good brick buildings, two-story, finished houses, and cottages, all painted white, located in the oak openings, gives the town a fine appearance .-

banks of Rock River, just above the village, and a most delightful spot it is too. I have only given you a few statistics, as I have a promise from a fairer hand than mine at description that you shall hear from this beautiful and fertile country; and if not as far-famed as the letters from under the bridge at Glen Mary, I doubt not they will be equally interesting to a portion of the many readers of your morning visiter.

HOME COLONIZING IN ENGLAND .- Now that all hopes of obtaining the necessaries of life by the ordinary methods of industry, in Great Britain, are at an end, the English people are directing their attention to Home Colonization. A large association has been formed at Queenswood, Hants, and is in a most promising condition. A gentleman who was by no means inclined to the olan has visited the Queenswood Association, and in his report, from which we make the following extracts, speaks, as will be seen, very favorably of it. After describing minutely the estate on which the colony is founded, and which is under a system of culture superior even to the best managed farms in England, he says, "I dined at the general table. The party were all on an equality. To farm lahorers it must be a grateful return to the spirit of old English usages, to have a confortable, orderly, and abundant meal. Such an arrangement must than one hundred dollars per annum, including speak in an inviting language to many in these hard times of high prices, low wages, nothing to do, and distinction of caste or condition."

Speaking of the mansion house, he says, "The kitchen is a very large apartment, free from all interference by smell or otherwise with the lodging apartments, fitted up with an excellent cooking apparatus on a complete scale and improved plan; with ovens, hot hearths, boilers and every requisite to supply heat to the school departments, and hot water night and day to the whole of the house .-There are attached to the kitchen large pantries and three rooms. A railway is under the floor for passing trays, &c. to and from the dining rooms, of which there are two, the one on the basement for ordinary purposes, and the other immediately above, on the first floor, for particular occasions, and meetings and parties of pleasure.

Each of these rooms is forty feet by twenty .-On each floor, and separated by the staircase from the dining-rooms, are two parlors or work-rooms, measuring thirty by twenty feet each. Over these parlors and dining-rooms are sixteen large dormitories or sleeping apartments, for single persons, thirty feet by twenty each; the beds surround the apartment, and are screened off by partitions, leaving a clear space in the centre sixteen feet by thirteen, in which tables and chairs are placed for reading and writing. Each bed recess is fitted up with a chest of drawers and chairs, and in the corner of the central space are a dressing table and washing stands, with a constant supply of hot and cold water, and waste pipes from each basin, so that no bringing of water, or carrying away slops, will occasion any waste of time. There are also, in another part of the mansion, convenient rooms for married people, and two lying-in rooms. The school-room, with offices for the teachers, the medical department, and excellent baths, are all in the most complete order.

The play-grounds for children are laid out with sports of the adult members of the community. The large dining-room is beautifully enriched with carved mouldings and embellished with exquisite fresco paintings, and the hydraulic apparatus is so constructed as to afford the means of ventilation in the summer season and an equal temperature in the winter. These societies are rapidly increasing in Great Britain. Presents are made to them from all who are desirous of their success, and the one we have been describing promises a remedy for many of the evils which the English people are laboring under. [Morning Post. IF A few drops of any perfumed oil will secure libraries from the consuming effects of mould and damp. Russian leather which is perfumed with the tar of the birch tree, never moulders;
